In every speech, it it known the Republican nominee will bespeak unity of action between Republicans and Progressives. So far as possible, even on the hurried "jumpe" across the continuant which his schedule requires, he will endeavor to confer with local leaders, familiarising himself with Senatorial and Congressional situations and working for all possible co-operation.

Mackano Tamas, who yesterday quit the Juares garrison with the announced purpose of joining the new revolt, carried 100 men with him, instead of seven, as first admitted by the Juares authorities.

along the Rio Grande to join re-enforcements which have been secretly pledged to enter the service of the new party.

A former fedemal general living in El Paso crossed the border secretly and joined General Tamas last night, say residents of Juages.

In the proclamation issued by General Tamas in proclaiming his revolt he declared that the plan of the legalist party will be the supreme law throughout Mexico during the revolution, which he intimated is being developed throughout he republic of Mexico.

It is said the revolt of Tamas is but one of a number of similar incidents due to occur almost simultaneously throughout Mexico.

The legalist revolution was begun three days ago when Gen. Louis Medina Barron landed with 209 followers at Sihuatanejo Guerrero, striking into the interior toward the Mexico National railroad, at Chilpancinge, within 150 miles of Mexico City.

The entire state of Chihuahua will be in the possession of the legalists within three days, they say. Gen. Jacinto Trevino, known to be a strong legalist adherent, has organized revolts similar to that in Juares at many points in the states of northeast Mexico, many assert.

Birikers continually boarded cars and as quietly as church deacons made their talk to motormen and conductors. Uniformed police on the cars were given no chance to act.

It was the first time in history that the Andes have been crossed in an aero plane or balloon, though many attempts have been made. Bradley and %uloaga had been trying persistently for three months, and the successful flight was the last they could have made, as the minister of war had ordered Captain Zuloago to return to his post. The journey was made in the spheroid balloon Eduardo Newberry, named after a pijot who lost his life in a similar attempt a few years ago. The balloon rose from the aviation grounds in Bantingo, Chile, at 8 o'clock on the morning of June 24 and reached a height of 18,000 leet directly over the city. At that altitude a strong easterly wind was met and the balloon began to move rapidly toward the mountains.

The balloon followed closely the route of the Transandine railway and continued to rise, ascending to 25,58 feet, or 4,140 feet higher than Mt. Aconcagus, the highest peak in the Western Hemisphere. At that altitude the temperature was 32 degrees below zero and the pilots suffered intensely with the and kept alive only by inhaling oxygen. A speed of 105 kilometers an hour was attained. Four hours after the start the pilota descended fithin four kilometers of Uspallata, Argentina. From there they went to Mendosa to await the transcontinents train to Buenos Ayres, arriving this afternoon.

an early departure for the mexican border."

This was the statement of Lieut. L. L. Johnson, in charge of the Ninth street recruiting station, this morning. "But this does not mean that we no longer need men." continued Lieutenant Johnson, "on the other hand it means that we are right now in need of men more than ever. Good Results Yesterday.

The two stations did an exceptionally good day's work yesterday, and some men applied today for enlistment. Until 11 o'cleck this morning twelve man were received into the guard, some of them being taken in yesterday and the rest this morning. Six of the recruits were assigned to the Third Regiment.

The men on duty at the station on Ninth street have discovered a new form of diversion with which they may occupy themselves during the sisck moments in their work. Across the street is a fortune-teller, and the men are all having their fortunes told.
